I'm a second-year graduate student at University of Washington CSE, where I am advised by Prof. Yejin Choi. My research centers around natural language understanding and generation.

I'm excited about machine learning techniques and deep-learning models for social commonsense and logical reasoning in text. I am currently investigating ways of representing effects of actions in stories dependent on logical reasoning, like math word problems.